“My Spritual Journal”

It is now officially Rosh Hashanah on the East Coast. According to the Jewish calendar, this is Tishrei 1, the first day of the Jewish New Year, and the entry point to another chapter of the history of God’s people.

Yesterday I was praying and reading from the book of the prophet Daniel, and the Lord revealed to me that as of sundown on the Jewish New Year (today) I would enter the “most intensified period of spiritual, mental, emotional, and even physical warfare” that I have ever experienced during my eleven years as a Christian.

God is merciful. I am keeping this journal—a task that is long overdue—in order to record, remember, and pass on to others all that will transpire in the days to come. I am, according to the instructions given to me by the Lord God Almighty, to keep this journal until the day I die, or until the day I vanish into the heavens. All the awesome and even frightening events that will take place in this world are already recorded in the Bible. Many will see in the days ahead that the Holy Scriptures will be a spiritual roadmap to show people the way to hope, deliverance, and victory, even as the world and society as we know it begins to crumble around us.
